

Environmental Policy

ALPI is aware that the company's sustainable success must be rooted in respect for the needs of the community and environment in which it works, in line with the evolution of society. On a par with economic and quality-related goals, sustainability based on social and environmental factors is a strong link in the value chain.

ALPI products have always been made in the city of Modigliana, in the province of Forlì-Cesena, in a social and environmental context traditionally favourable to the sustainable manufacturing of reconstituted wood. ALPI products bring aesthetically designed excellence to the entire world, along with corporate values rooted in local culture and respect for the environment.

Starting with the forests and cultivations it manages, mainly in Cameroon, ALPI is committed to preserving the environment from all forms of deterioration. It identifies risks in its production processes and mitigates the real and potential impact of these while considering the consequences of transporting raw material and finished product, and employees' travel between work and home. Such commitment starts in the responsible management of forest concessions in the Congo Basin, where Ayous grows, the main raw material used in production. The responsibility extends to the entire supply and production chain until Modigliana, where the water of the Marzeno stream that is used in the production process is purified and returned to the stream completely clean.

In accordance with a periodically reviewed context analysis, the company is committed to the following points in particular:

- Protecting the environment and preventing all forms of pollution.
- Complying with the law and all applicable environmental regulations, both national and local, specifically the content of the Autorizzazione Unica Ambientale granted by the City of Modigliana, and the other requisites underwritten by ALPI that are related to the company's environmental credentials. Examples are the European Union Eco-Management and Audit Scheme; the association policy of the Forest Stewardship Council (license number FSC-Coo4666); and the IWAY standard, edition 6.0 (the Ikea way of responsibly procuring products, services, materials and components).
- Respecting all norms of control, traceability and legality regarding the origin of wood materials.
- Working transparently in the environmental and social spheres, constantly aiming for excellence in the use of natural resources.
- Using wood from certified origins to guarantee the sustainable management of forests, and adopting the rules of low-impact wood extraction.
- Giving support to the ALPI subsidiaries in Cameroon to operate in full respect of the requisites required by Forest Stewardship Council certification with the label FSC® 100% in the ALPI forest concessions there.
- Researching and applying the best available technology to reduce emissions, waste, water and energy consumption.
- Continuously improving the ALPI environmental management system to elevate the company's environmental performance in terms of carbon footprint and the impact of products' life cycle.
- Adhering to the nascent Renewable Energy Community being established by the City of Modigliana by supplying data regarding energy consumption and making surfaces available for photovoltaic modules.
- Encouraging suppliers of good and services to elevate their environmental performance and monitor the results.
- Redacting an annual analysis of the company's sustainability.

ALPI S.p.A. identifies the ISO 14001:2015 (an internationally agreed standard that sets out the requirements for an environmental management system) as a suitable tool by which to ensure the systemic oversight of its environmental responsibilities. Through this standard, ALPI responds to climate change while balancing its response with the requirements of the socio-economic context and contributing to the environmental pillar of sustainability. The leadership at ALPI is committed to putting into practice the guidelines of the present environmental policy to establish and periodically re-examine its environmental goals and achievements.

"ALPI confirms its commitment to advance the transparency and ethics of the corporate values, which sustain that quality of life is rooted in respect for people and the environment".
